National Health and Safety Administrator (NHSA™) Application

The National Health and Safety Administrator (NHSA™) program and designation provides formal, entry-level training to individuals who are active in the administration of their company's health and safety program but do not currently possess a minimum of three years of construction safety-related field experience in the past ten years*. The NHSA™ certification meets the national standard requirements and verifies that a person has met the training, practical application, and written performance measurements set out by the Canadian Federation of Construction Safety Associations (CFCSA). Persons who achieve the NHSA™ designation are a valuable resource who offer administrative support to both the company and its National Construction Safety Officer (NCSO®) in implementing and maintaining the company's health and safety management system.

NHSA™ certificate holders may apply to upgrade to the NCSO® designation once experience requirements have been met.
